THE DESCENT OF KING ALFRED

(From Burke's Royal Families of England, Scotland and Wales, Vol. I.)

"CERDIC, the Saxon, crowned at Winchester in 532, as third monarch of the Englishmen, is styled by Gibbon 'one of the bravest of the children of Woden'. He was father of the renowned Cenric from whom derived in direct descent Egbert, who, previously to his advent to the throne held a command in the army of Charlemagne.

"In 800 at the decease of King Brithric, Egbert was called by the voice of his countrymen to assume the government of Wessex, and he subsequently succeeded in reducing all the kingdoms of the heptarchy under his sway. His reign, a long and glorious one, is memorable for its great victories over the Danes. Egbert died in 836, leaving by Redburga, his wife, two sons and one daughter.

"His son Ethelwulf was his successor. Though fitter to wear the cowl than wield the sceptre, he evinced much courage and activity when the moment of action called out his energies. In his time the Danes suffered defeat and great slaughter and retired from the shores of Britain.

"Ethelwulf died in 858, and was buried at Winchester, leaving by Osburgha his first wife, who was daughter of Oslac the Thane, Grand Butler of England, several children, including iv — Alfred, later known as Alfred the Great."
